FOREWORD

TWENTY-FIVE years ago the missionary was regarded as a visionary and a dreamer. The Orient was lumped together in an idea of spices, incense, and curious lacquers. Those distant regions were inhabited by bushmen, cannibals, and lions.

Not until very recent years has the Occidental world, and even the great body of church members, known what the foreign missionary is really doing. He has in reality been the carrier of the Christian democratic ideal to every nation of the earth. He has been the first to open the doors of closed lands.

The teachings of the foreign missionary have pried loose the great non-Christian peoples from their age-long conservatism. He goes out today to build a new civilization, and his task is as many-sided, therefore, as civilization itself. It is because this real work of the foreign missionary challenges America's growing leaders, that this pamphlet is issued.

It is issued jointly by the Board of Foreign Missions, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

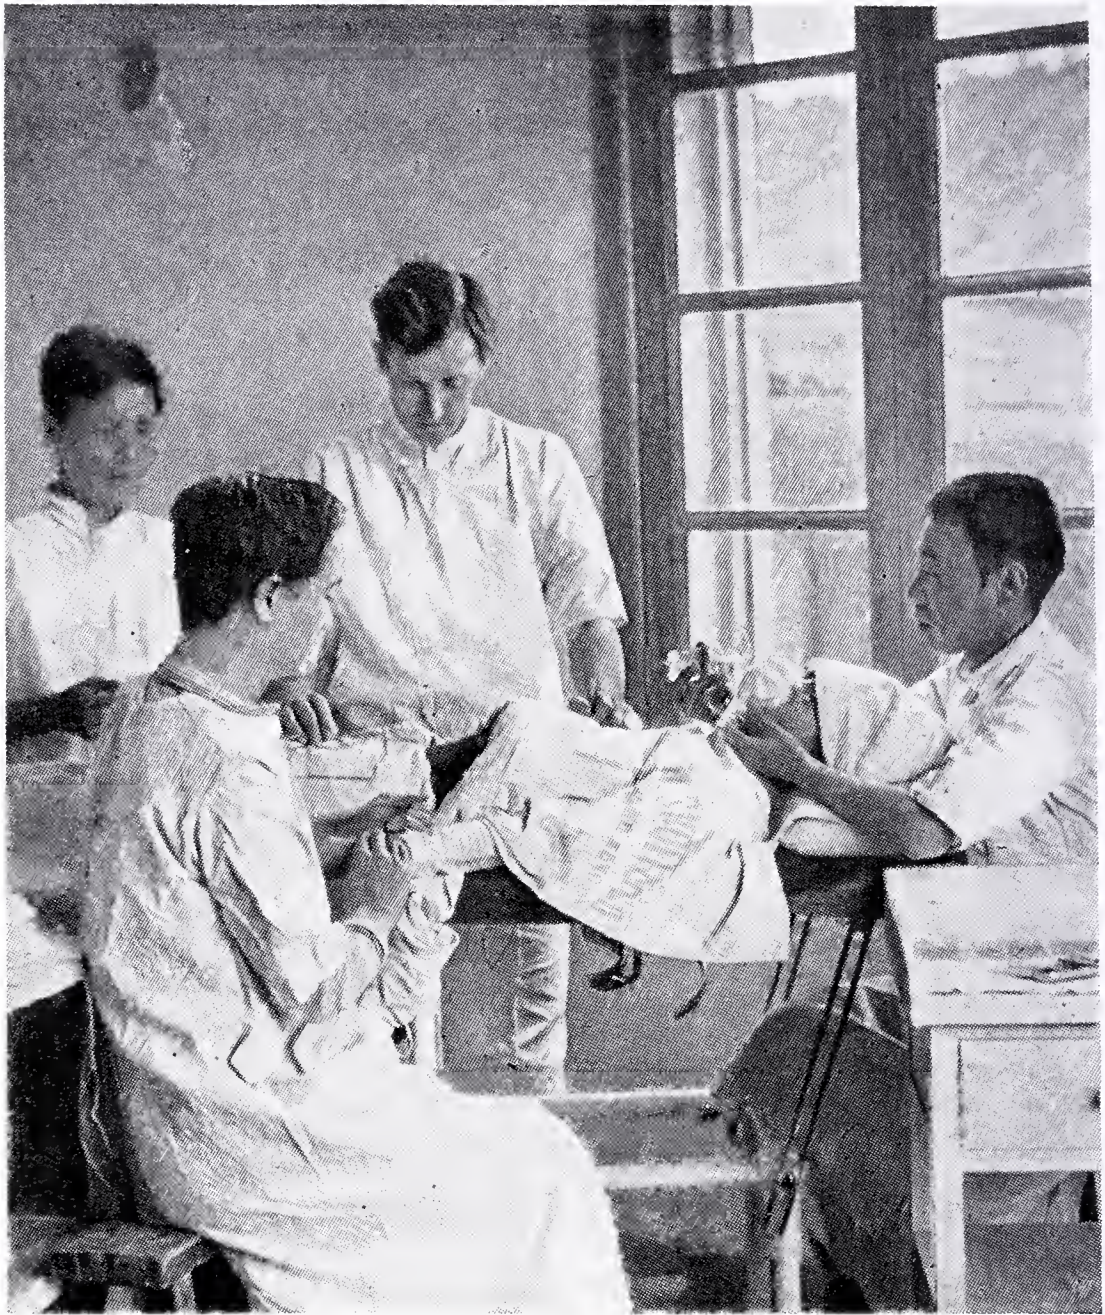

Part One presents opportunities for service under the Board of Foreign Missions; and Part Two, opportunities for service under the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

In reading these pages of opportunity for efficient Christian doctors and nurses, educational directors, teachers, agricultural men and general missionaries, young men and women may be aided in planning for the investment of their lives.

There is a demand for only the strong in every place mentioned. Will America's best supply that demand? They must.

PART ONE

THE MEDICAL MISSIONARY

MEDICAL missionary work is conducted on the same general principle as hospital work in America, except that the doctor is both practitioner and surgeon. Doctors and nurses are needed on the missionary field today as never before. In no country has the number of physicians even begun to keep pace with the need. Our Methodist hospitals in China alone average about 150,000 treatments annually.

The missionary doctor finds himself also the leader in a multitude of new movements related to the conservation of human life. He becomes the city and sometimes the provincial force in health matters. He has anti-tuberculosis campaigns, advises in regard to municipal sanitation, and introduces quarantine regulations. He is the pioneer in teaching mothers about baby feeding, protection of milk and other food, and care of children's diseases. And yet in certain cities, just because of lack of men, a number of our largest hospitals are closed.

For example, at Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi Province, in the heart of China, there is a hospital waiting because its one physician was compelled to return to America. Two physicians and a nurse should go there at once. Nanchang is a city of one million people, in the center of a province with a population of 26,000,000. It has direct rail and boat connection with Kiukiang on the Yangtze river. It is only two days by rail and steamer from Shanghai. Our mission is beautifully located on the banks of the Kan river.

Another region for large medical service is in Africa. At Tanganyika a physician is needed to build his own hospital. The city is reached by means of the Cape-to-Cairo Railway, which runs via the famous Victoria Falls. There is not a physician in this whole region, and the man who goes there would have an opportunity to do pioneer work in the campaign for sanitation and conservation of health.

Women nurses are needed wherever there is a hospital. There is an especial need for a nurse at the Union Medical College, Seoul, Korea. (See page 31 for description of Seoul.)

The faculty of the Medical College consists of nineteen professors. There are eighty-six students.

In Java, at Tjisaroea, one of the trade centers of the island, a nurse is needed to cooperate with Dr. Perkins. Tjisaroea is a great rice and tea estate, on the Government post-road, fifteen miles south of Buitenzorg, and in direct rail communication with Batavia. It lies right on the slope of Mt. Gede, one of Java's many old volcanoes. Java is a beautiful country, though it is just a few degrees south of the equator. The population, mostly Chinese, numbers 575 to the square mile.

Your move next! A lively game of checkers is a good way to make one forget aches and pains. These boys are patients in the Methodist Hospital in Peking, where forty thousand treatments were given last year in the Dispensary

THE GENERAL MISSIONARY

WE speak of the general missionary because his work is much more than simply evangelistic. The general missionary must cooperate with the Methodist churches of an entire district in their church work. Though he will usually preach once a week, he must also supervise day schools in connection with each church. Our churches in mission countries are used seven days a week. The general missionary's work is more executive than anything else.

As an illustration of general missionary work, take the need of a man at Loanda, West Africa. This is the capital city of the district of the same name. It has a population of 28,000, and is situated on the Atlantic coast. Our mission there is in the very heart of the city on a plateau overlooking the sea. Loanda is probably the chief city of the Portuguese province of Angola. Angola is one of the largest political divisions of Africa, and, because of the richness of its soil and mineral wealth, one of the most important. Railroads already stretch inland from Loanda, and plans have been made for the extension of these roads to connect with the Central, East, and South African transportation systems.

Our church is responsible for the evangelization of a zone clear across the province between the seventh and eleventh parallels; an area equal to that of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. In this zone no other Protestant work is conducted. Here is an opportunity for one or two strong leaders to fashion the civilization for this entire region for the next few years.

Another particularly opportune place is Haiju, Korea. The Haiju district comprises a strip of territory stretching along the Yellow Sea, two hundred miles east and west, by sixty to seventy-five miles north and south. It is a rolling, hilly country with extremely fertile soil, and has a population of 330,000. Haiju city is the provincial capital, and a growing town of 15,000 population.

Korea stands at the parting of the ways today. She will become a great country. Her immediate pressing problem is whether she will follow the line of materialism and commercialism alone, or will go forward under the light of Christian ideals. The lack, or presence, of strong Christian leaders will determine the direction of Korea's future development.

Like a clerk at the ribbon counter, a missionary must always carry a pair of scissors with him. Hinduism demands one lock of hair to remain unshorn on the heads of its followers. The cutting of this sacred lock at baptism symbolizes the breaking away from the bonds of the old religion

THE EDUCATIONAL MISSIONARY

Colleges

TEACHING in mission colleges differs from teaching in American institutions chiefly because the missionary professor is associated with students of a nationality other than his own. The missionary professor goes to another land, realizing that his services in building world civilization will count for more there than they would at home.

One college, for which strong teachers must be secured, is the West China Union University, located at Chengtu, in the province of Szechuan, which has a population of 65,000,000. Chengtu is a city of 500,000, and the capital of the province. It is reached from Shanghai by means of rail, steamer, and sedan chair. The province is traversed by a number of good roads and waterways. A projected railway line includes Chengtu in its course. Within twenty-five years it will be the great railway center for Western China. The University buildings are being rapidly erected on a large campus of one hundred acres.

Another strategic institution is the college at Foochow, the capital of Fukien province. Foochow is a city of 800,000 people, nearly midway between Shanghai and Hongkong, with which cities it is connected by excellent steamer service. It is one of the five Chinese ports first opened to commerce and foreign residents by the treaty of 1842. The Methodist Mission in this city is located on a large island, which is connected with the mainland by the "Bridge of Ten Thousand Ages." The American Consulate lies alongside our grounds. Fukien province is so mountainous that it is sometimes called the Switzerland of China. The mountains are covered with bamboo and fir, and many small streams plunge down through the valleys. The city is situated at the mouth of the Min river.

High Schools

Our high and day schools are peculiarly far-reaching in their service, because they train the young men who are to be the leaders of each country in the coming generation. What will it mean for the civilization of the future, to have these young men, trained in mission schools and dominated by Christian ideals, go out to build Christian bridges and railroads, cultivate Christian farms, with the increase in production this means, and become the local, and especially the foreign, tradesmen of the nations of the earth? What will it not mean for the future peace and progress of the earth, if they, with their clear ideals of Christian world democracy, shall rise to control their nations in Christian national and international life?

Primary or Day Schools

This work is entirely supervisory. The studies are equivalent to the first four grades of the American public school. They are the first step in the mission educational system. This work is particularly necessary in the Mass Movement areas of India, where hundreds of thousands of people are coming to be baptized, but are wholly uninstructed.

A statement as to qualifications, requirements, and financial provision will be found on pages 36 and 37.

For further information in regard to opportunities for missionary service, requirements and provisions, address: The Candidate Department, Board of Foreign Missions, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Long fingernails and narrow chests are no longer cultivated by Chinese students. That muscle now plays an important part in college life was demonstrated at the Second Far Eastern Olympiad held in Shanghai in the spring of 1915

PART TWO

THE MEDICAL MISSIONARY

MEDICAL missionary work for both men and women is identical. A description of the kind of service required is given on pages 7 and 8, in Part One.

The following places are illustrative of the location of our needs for women physicians and nurses.

Bareilly, India, population 129,462, is the civil and military headquarters and an important railway center. It is said to be one of the most healthful cities in North India. The woman's hospital has 52 beds, and reports 39,262 dispensary patients for the year. There is a class of nurses in training.

Brindaban, population 30,000, is almost wholly given up to the worship of Krishna. An annual festival brings 100,000 pilgrims to the city from all parts of India. It is stated that one third of its population are widows. An empty hospital of 24 beds is waiting a doctor.

Peking, the capital of China, population 700,000, contains many handsome residences and gardens of princes and court officials, as well as residence compounds, hospitals and schools of a strong mission force. There is a well constructed new Woman's Hospital of 80 beds, serving princesses as well as the poor. There is a Union Training School for Nurses connected with the hospital, through which a large social work is done. The physicians teach in the Woman's Union Medical College.

Chinkiang is a busy port city 150 miles up the Yangtze river from Shanghai. It is also on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway. A fine hospital building, 50 beds, now closed and waiting a doctor, upon whom the entire missionary community is dependent for medical service.

Seoul, Korea. For description of this city, see Educational statement, page 31. It has a hospital with 38 beds and 10,000 dispensary patients annually. This affords an unusual opportunity to reach women of the official class.

Baroda, India, population 125,000, is the capital of the native state of the same name, 248 miles from Bombay. Under the progressive and enlightened administration of the present ruler, Baroda is rapidly becoming an important educational center. A nurse is needed to take charge of a large hospital with a Nurses' Training Class.

Sienyu, China, in the Fukien province, about 30 miles from the coast, is located among a people comparatively well off. A homeopathic hospital of 70 beds calls for a trained nurse.

These nurses are the special friends of Manila's child population. In one month alone, one-seventh of all the babies born in Manila first saw the light of day in the Mary Johnson Hospital. With a capacity of ninety beds, three hundred children are taken care of during the year. This hospital also has the proud distinction of possessing a crib which holds twenty babies at once

THE GENERAL MISSIONARY

THESE missionaries instruct Christian and non-Christian women, conduct women's meetings, direct native evangelists and Bible readers, and supervise Sunday schools and day schools. They have charge of this kind of work, not only in cities, but throughout the rural districts as well. Normal training is an important qualification in candidates for this kind of missionary work.

Nagasaki, Japan, population 176,000, is the seventh city of Japan in size, and third in the importance of the foreign settlement. It lies on a deep and beautiful bay at the western end of the island of Kyushu. This city is known for its large ship-building trade, for its coal mining, and for the manufacture of the renowned Arita porcelain. From the Christian standpoint, Nagasaki is the most interesting city, historically, in the empire. It was at one time, over three hundred years ago, a thoroughly Christian community. Afterward it became the scene of the most terrific Christian persecutions. An additional missionary is needed here to help carry on the work.

Jubbulpore, India, population 100,000, is an important commercial and industrial town. It is the headquarters of the civil district of the same name, situated on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. It includes a cantonment of troops, and ranks as second city in the Central Provinces. A Girls' High School, a Theological Institute, and a larger evangelistic work are located here. Our Mission is the only one working within the bounds of this large District. A missionary is urgently needed who can give herself wholly to evangelistic work among the women and girls.

Special Need in India. It is estimated that there are not less than three million women in the Mass Movement areas calling for instruction and baptism. It is stated that 60,000 Methodist children are without school privileges. The Executive Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Southern Asia has issued a call for fifty women missionaries to work in the Mass Movement areas.

More and more native women who have been taught by the missionaries are being used to pass on their accomplishments to less fortunate sisters. So that they can be real helpmeets, these Indian women are learning to read while their husbands are studying theology.

THE EDUCATIONAL MISSIONARY

EDUCATIONAL work for both men and women is identical. A description of the kind of service required is given on pages 16 and 17 in Part One.

The following places are illustrative of the location of our needs for women teachers.

Tokyo, the sixth city of the world in size, population 2,200,000, is the capital of Japan, and a large student center. It has imposing buildings, beautiful parks, and a large foreign community, chiefly missionary and diplomatic. The Girls' School, with an enrolment of 440, is located on one of the most beautiful compounds in the Orient.

Montevideo, a beautiful city of 300,000, is the capital of the Republic of Uruguay, South America. A new site has been purchased, and a large building will be erected to provide for an enlargement of the present school.

Lahore, India, population 210,000, is the political capital of the Punjab, and one of the most important educational centers in North India. About sixty per cent of the population are Mohammedans. The Girls' School is in its fourth year, and is well housed in a new building.

Old Umtali, Africa, 200 miles from Beira, is 3,500 feet above sea level, and has a good climate. Located about 20 miles from Umtali, it is an important railway and Government center. The school has ninety students, with academic and industrial departments.

Nanking, China, population about 200,000, is the meeting-place of the two railroads that connect Shanghai and Peking, and will soon tap the railroad being pushed west of Nanchang; an important commercial and educational center where are located the University of Nanking and Ginling College for women. There is a foreign community of over 400. In Nanking, and surrounding districts, there is being developed a well graded and articulated system of education, leading from primary day schools to high school and college. A specialist in supervision of primary schools is needed here.

Seoul, Korea, a walled city of about 250,000 people, is the center of the political, intellectual, and social life of the people. It is fast becoming a modern city. Streets have been widened; there are electric lights, telephone, telegraph and postal facilities, water works, banks, hotels, trolley cars, and two railroad stations. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society educational system extends from kindergarten to college. A well trained kindergarten teacher is needed for the supervision of three kindergartens, with an enrolment of 180.

Calcutta, India, population 1,100,000, was until 1911 the capital of British India. It is a fine city with imposing buildings, and wide, well paved streets. It has a large immigrant population; no less than fifty-seven different languages are spoken. The Girls'

High School, with an enrolment of over 300, furnishes instruction in the English language.

Nagasaki, Japan, population 176,000, lies on a harbor which is considered one of the most beautiful in the world. It is of historic interest, especially in connection with early Catholic Christianity in Japan. The Girls' School is one of the oldest and largest in Japan, and occupies a commanding location overlooking the water.

Kiukiang, China, population 40,000, is a walled city beautifully situated on the south bank of the Yangtze, about 450 miles southwest of Shanghai. A high grade Bible Training School occupies a large modern building, and prepares Chinese women for general missionary work.

This studious girl is not liable to tolerate the services of a "go-between." The broad education she receives at the Mission School will give her ideals and independence. She will choose her own husband, and build her own career

Contract Teachers

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society sends a limited number of teachers under a special contract as to length of term and salary. Such teachers are needed in:

Darjeeling, India, a hill station, delightfully and healthfully located, where there is an English school for girls.

Lima, population 140,000, the capital of Peru. The city has an excellent system of water works, public squares, hospitals, and very good stores. San Marcos University, founded in 1551 in Lima, is the oldest on the Western Continent. An excellent Girls' School is being developed, and draws its students from the highest and most representative classes, as well as from those lower.

Opportunity for Life Investment

The civilization of the world today is being defended by the lives of men. The civilization of the future years must be builded on the same foundation. We are allied with or fighting against the people of practically every mission field. As we are bound with them in the war today, we must tomorrow be bound together with them in peace.

The ideals that dominate those lands will either be Christian and guide the nations along such channels, or they will be non-Christian, leading the peoples in resultant bypaths, tending to plunge the world again into the maelstrom of conflict between liberty and domination. Universal freedom is found alone in Jesus Christ. What does this challenge you to do in considering the investment for your life, which will bring the largest returns in the world's Christian civilization?

Qualifications and Requirements

When the missionary first goes to the field, he should be between the ages of 22 and 32. The candidate for missionary service should have absolute belief in the saving power of Jesus Christ for the entire world. His character also must be above suspicion. In the words of Dr. Stanley White, "No man ever escapes temptation, but the candidate for mission service must not be giving hospitality to any known sin."

The candidate must have sound health, and pass a strict physical examination.

The medical missionary should be a graduate both of college, and a Grade A medical school, with experience as an interne.

The general missionary should have a college education, together with training in the theological seminary, or other graduate work, as well as practical experience in preaching, teaching, and business.

The educational missionary should be a college graduate, and have some normal or post-graduate training; while those who go to teach special subjects in universities, must have specialized experience and training in the branch which they go to teach.

Financial Provision

Because of the variations in living conditions, salaries are not uniform for all the different fields. The established basis, however, for the foreign missionary is an amount sufficient for comfortable support while in active service, and pension when retired. Travelling expenses to and from the field, together with necessary vacations and furloughs, are provided by the Missionary Board. The aim is not remuneration, but a sufficient provision for a reasonable living, so that the missionary can devote his whole energies to the task assigned.

For further information in regard to opportunities for missionary service, requirements, and provisions, address: Miss Amy G. Lewis, Secretary, General Office of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.
